Our Friend, Bill Kerth

Bill Kerth Sr. CCFSC Loses Great Friend and Supporter

Figure skating enthusiasts lost a great friend and supporter last month when Bill Kerth Sr., a lifelong North Sacramento resident and businessman, who successfully coordinated skating events for the 1960 Winter Olympics at Squaw Valley, died in a motor vehicle accident in Davis.

Kerth, 71, the father of Sacramento City Councilman Robert Kerth, and his sister Eva Brandt Kerth were the owners of Iceland Arena, as well as long time CCFSC members.

After his success in coordinating the 1960 Olympic skating events, Kerth was asked by the Austrian government to serve as a consultant for the 1964 games at Innsbruck. He went on to perform consulting work for several other Olympic Games.

He had received an electrical engineering degree from the University of Oklahoma.

Kerth once noted the irony of being such a successful ice-rink consultant from the often hot Sacramento Valley. "Yes it's odd," he said. "Being an ice expert from Sacramento is something different."

Known in the North Sacramento community for his wit and humor generosity and willingness to help. He was a master machinist and a certified welder. He was an avid amateur photographer and inventor whose creations ranged from hand crafted toys to a 16 inch telescope. Of course he was also an avid figure skater and instructor.

When Kerth was a teenager, his father opened Iceland in 1940. He went on to teach figure skating at Iceland and ran the rink upon the death of his father in 1947. He met his wife, Jeanne, at the rink.

A beautiful memorial service was held at Iceland on the 20th of November, where several hundred friends attended and remembered Bill.

Kerth is survived by his wife, Jeanne; three sons, Bill Jr., Tom and Robert; three daughters, Terrie, Wendy and Sherri; and three grandchildren.

On behalf of the CCFSC Board of directors and the entire CCFSC membership, we at Ice Chips would like to extend our sincere condolences to the family of Bill Kerth, Sr., at this time of their great loss. Our thoughts are with you all.

(Pacific Coasts) will advance to the National Championships in Bountiful, Utah next month. The following report was filed by Trinda Bedrossian.

CCFSC was well represented in the 1994 Central Pacific Regional Figure Skating Championship in Bountiful, Utah on November 3 - 6, 1993.

Nestled in the beautiful mountain foothills, setting about 10 miles north of Salt Lake City, the five skaters representing CCFSC skated their very best in a number of events. Christi Freeman placed 2nd and Amanda Silva placed 3rd in Novice Ladies Figures; both qualified and will go on to represent CCFSC in the Pacific Coast Championships to be held in Redwood City December 6-10. Christi Freeman also dazzled the judges in her Novice Ladies Freeskating by placing 4th in the Technical Program, 2nd in the Freeski and 2nd overall in the first round. She went on to place 6th and 8th in the Final Round. Competing in Intermediate Ladies, Ginny Sakima placed 8th in Figures, 10th in Freeskating and 11th Overall. Adeena Tomiyama skated Sub-Juvenile Ladies in which she placed 5th in Figures, 9th in Freeskating and 9th Overall. Adeena also skated her Juvenile Artistic Program in which she placed 11th. Kelley Ristau also skated Sub-Juvenile Ladies in which she placed 2nd in Figures, 8th in Freeskating and 6th Overall. Kelley also skated her Sub-Juvenile Artistic Program and placed 3rd. Congratulations to all of those who represented CCFSC and Good Luck to Christi and Amanda at Coast!

Bill Kerth: A Man Worth Remembering

-by Cindy Adams Arvin

On November 10, 1993, we all lost a great friend. William Kerth Sr., or Bill as he was known to most of us.

When asked to write something about Bill, I thought it would be fairly easy. After all, I had known him since I was ten years old and had spent hours with him learning to skate. But I found it to be one of the more difficult tasks that I've ever faced.

Bill was a loving father, a master engineer, a mentor to thousands of skaters and a true friend to all that knew him. He dabbled in photography and writing, served as a consultant for the design construction of ice rinks for several Olympic Games, played a major role in providing the public with an outdoor ice rink at Squaw Valley and in downtown Sacramento during the holidays, and built the first ice resurfacing machine in the world, using a retired World War II Jeep he called "Snooky". In short, Bill was a unique man.

My dilemma was how to put on paper what Bill meant to me. As I thought about him, a few special memories came to mind, which I hope will stir your own thoughts and memories of Bill.

I first remember Bill when he was giving free skating lessons to local children and the public on Thursday afternoons. I would rush after school at Woodlake Elementary School to take part in his classes. I learned edges and Tee-Stops and how to execute a bunny hop and tap waltz jump before going on to his Saturday Junior classes. I eventually took private one-on-one lessons with Bill, which got me hooked on skating and made me the enthusiast that I am today.

Bill would often ask me to do a particular jump or spin that was beyond my ability. When I would answer, "I can't," his reply would always be, "Never say, 'I can't,' say, 'I haven't learned yet.'"

Bill was not just a skating teacher, but a person who taught me many things about life. He was always ready with a smile and a warm hug whether I was meeting him at the ice rink at 6 a.m. for a lesson or running in to him at local events. He was the man who called me "Lammie" or "Dolly" and took me out for an ice cream sundae on my 16th birthday when my parents were out of town.

Because I grew up in the Woodlake area, Iceland was like a second home for me, and Bill, Jean, Eva and all the Kerths were like family. Bill would often stop by my family's home on Thanksgiving and Christmas to wish us happy holidays. And when I was 18, and my Dad passed away, I remember Bill being at our house and putting his arm around me to make sure I was doing okay.

I can't begin to know all the joy and talent Bill brought to the world, but I know he made an impression on my life as I'm sure he did for others. I will miss his smile, his enthusiasm, his purple jacket and bolo ties, his footwork and crossfoot spins that I never quite mastered and his contagious energy when talking about his many ongoing projects.

But most of all, I will miss him.

Skater of the Month

Ronnie Mompellier December Skater of the Month

Congratulations to our latest skater of the month, Miss Ronnie Mompellier. Ronnie is a 14 year old freshman in the IB Program at Mira Loma High School, and would like to major in science.

Ronnie has been skating for 1 1/2 years and has recently landed her axel. Her goals for this year are to perfect her axel and work on her double Salchow.

Her future goals for skating are to land a triple jump. Ronnie's other interests outside of skating are ballet, gymnastics and piano. She loves just being with friends, going skiing and of course talking on the phone...a self described "typical teenager!"

Congrats' again to Miss Ronnie Mompellier, our December '93 Skater of the Month!

Don't Fret!!

"Kelley's Korner" will return next month. Hey, we all need a break now & then, right?!

So stay tuned for the next exciting installment of "Kelley's Korner"!©

A Few Words for the Parents

As the parent of a skater, one of the most difficult (and the most important) decision is the selection of a professional skating instructor (know commonly as a professional, or simply, a "Pro").

As a skater moves from group instruction in the Basic Skills Program to the expensive level of private instruction, she will want to get the best value for her skating dollar.

The unsuspecting parent or skater may assume that to call oneself a "Professional" requires some sort of demonstration of skating and/or teaching competency. Sadly, this is not the case. Virtually anyone may deem him or herself a "Pro" and set out to teach (and it happens!).

So how is the parent/skater new to the sport to know whom is best for them? Several things should be considered:

1) Reputation: Do a pro's skaters do well in competitions, and pass tests? Talk with parents of skaters at the rink, but remember, however that parents of skaters of a particular pro may be prejudiced for them, and parents of other pro's may be prejudiced against them.

2) Experience: How long have they been teaching at the level of YOUR skater? A pro with extensive experience at the highest levels may not be appropriate for a beginning skater; conversely, a skater at the senior level might not wish to take lessons from someone with exclusive experience with beginning skaters.

3) Temperament: Watch the pro during a patch or freestyle session... how do they relate to the the skaters?, i.e., encouragement, attention and praise, or negativity. Only you know how your child will respond to various forms of motivation.

4) Amateur Achievements: A pro's personal accomplishments prior to turning professional may be significant. These may include testing levels in figures, free-style, dance, and pairs as well as championships. A skater working on her seventh figures test might think twice before taking lessons from a pro who has only passed their 4th test. Bear in mind, however, that a pro's amateur accomplishments may not in themselves indicate any aptitude in teaching these skills.

5) Credentials: One of the most valuable services the PSGA provides the skating public is that of rating instructors according to their teaching skills (see below). While no pro is required to join the PSGA, and there may be many excellent instructors not rated with by the Guild, a pro rated by the PSGA has put his/her competency to the test. PSGA ratings are not easy to get. There are stringent requirements, i.e., the pro must have taught for a specific number of years, must have passed the test for which he is to be rated, or had a pupil pass that test and pass a very tough oral examination. A pro must have thorough knowledge of technique and an understanding of the dynamics behind them. Candidates are also questioned on music, program construction, the learning process, ethics and relation with pupils and parents. For more information, write:

Do You Know Your Coaches Credentials?

-by Sandy Lamb

I have coached beginning to Olympic skaters. Last year I had the parent of a beginning skater call me about lessons and asked me to provide my credentials. This was the first time in my coaching career that I have ever been asked, and I was pleased to respond. When coaches care about their profession, they join the PSGA (Professional Skaters Guild of America) and work to continue their education by putting their work "on the line" to attain ratings and professional accreditation.

It is a misconception that the PSGA members specialize in coaching high level competitive skaters. The Guild offers opportunities for growth to all interested coaches and patrons.

Professional Skaters Magazine is published six times a year and covers a wide variety of topics including free style, figure dance pairs, and group instructions, ratings and rule changes.

A PSGA rated professional has coaching experience, has been examined by a panel of experts, and has been found to be knowledgeable in his area of specialization. There are ratings from figures, free skating, dance, pairs, choreography, group, program administration, and precision. Ratings are given at the registered, certified senior and master levels. Once a rating has been earned, a professional must acquire at least twelve continuing educational credits every three years to maintain his rating.

Seminars and workshops are held throughout the country allowing members to exchange information, ideas and techniques and create renewed enthusiasm for teaching. Attendance at these seminars fulfills the continuing educational requirements.

International coaches Conference is held each May, and offers seminars on such topics as sports psychology, sports medicine, choreography, and music editing as well as figure, free skating, dance, pairs, and group instruction.

Additionally, PSGA members may participate in group health insurance, liability insurance, and retirement programs.

I am proud of my affiliation with this the worlds largest organization of ice skating professionals. Care if your child is working with a PSGA rated coach; it does make a difference!

Tips From the Pros

Jayne is a USFSA Gold Medalist in Figures, Freestyle and Dance; Master Rated by PSQA; BA., Coaching & Sports Management; Director of the Iceland Skating School; Ice Crystals Precision Team coach. She has been a professional skating instructor for over 15 years.

This month, we present an interesting article, based on excerpts from a report by David B. Coppel, Ph.D. on sports Psychology.

Helping You Learn Skills for Successful Performance

Most of you realize that sports performance is a combination of both mental and physical skills peaking at the same time to obtain the optimal or desired result.

Most of you have had experiences, when your attitudes, beliefs, thoughts, emotions, and expectations influenced your performance. There are ways that these mental training components can be improved to increase the probability of a successful performance. Some athletes include mental preparation, pre competitive mental imagery, relaxation, and other techniques as part of their overall training plan. These mental training skills become a habit.

It may be useful to organize these mental aspects of sport into seven basic areas -- The 7 C's (7 words that begin with C)

1. COMMITMENT: Commitment involves the establishing of objectives, goals and even dreams, and commitment to high quality effort.

2. CONTROL: In general, high level athletes must obviously be able to control their physical movements and skills in order to perform well. In addition, they must be able to control their moods, distracting thoughts and emotion. While complete control may not be possible, the greater degree of control an individual feels, the more confidence they experience and the greater the probability of a successful performance.

3. CONCENTRATION: While many athletes are able to focus initially, many have to acquire the ability to refocus after distractions or mistakes. Being able to refocus on your program after a fall is crucial for continuity, confidence and your general level of performance. Practicing the focus and refocus allows you to feel confident these skills will be available at the time of competition.

4. CONFIDENCE: Confidence involves the expectation of success and can be reflected in your verbal and non-verbal behaviors. How you act on warm-up, how you appear pre-competitively, how you communicate to yourself and to others, all can display the level of confidence you feel. Confidence can refer to core beliefs about yourself and your abilities; it also can refer to expectations of landing a jump or a specific jump.

5. COMMUNICATION: Communication refers not only to the communication within an individual, but also to the communications between individuals. The things you say to yourself, the self-statements and self-talk, are an important component that relates to the experience and outcome of your performance. The communications and relationships you have with other people help to form attitudes and feelings that can influence performance. Sports psychologists can help you to recognize some of the inaccurate, distorted, or self-defeating statements or attitudes that you may be thinking or expressing that relate to poorer performance. Finding alternative self-talk that is more precise and accurate, believable and most importantly helpful and functional can be a major focus of work with a sports psychologist.

6. CONSISTENCY: Consistency is crucial to developing a sense of confidence in one's ability. It is creating consistency in your effort and in creating the conditions that produce good effort and good outcomes. Being able to produce on a consistent basis, a pre competitive level of muscle tension and/or mental focus that is related to optimal performance, is crucial to being able to produce consistent outcomes, and feeling confident.

7. COMPETENCE: Competence deals with the sense an individual has that they are able to do what they need to do when they need to do it. It is a core belief of being able to produce good effort and performance. Courage and general coping skills also contribute to competitive performance. Coping skills involve the ability to cope with mistakes or disappointments and move forward with a positive attitude. Individuals who can come away from any training session or competitive experience having learned or focused on something that is going to move them forward, have traits that are important in successful performance.

November Cross Word Solution

Precision Teams

The Ice Crystals

On Friday November 19, we had a pretty good turn-out at Club Night. Everyone seemed to have loads of fun.

The Precision team held their first annual Skate-athon during the first 15 minutes. The skaters skated laps around the outside edge of the rink for 15 minutes. No one stopped... not even once! We raised $$ for our trip to Oregon in February.

Kelley Ristau did the most laps with 53; way to go Kelley. Jessica Mulock came in 2nd with 51 and Valerie Billeci was 3rd with 48 laps. Great job girls.

Everyone did great and fun was had by all.

Downtown Rink Update

The Downtown Plaza Association was contacted recently regarding CCFSC performing on the K Street Winter Ice Rink in exhibitions as we've done these last three years. Apparently, last year there were a few people put-off by having to wait for our exhibition to finish so that they could use the ice. A least an equal number reported that they really enjoyed our exhibitions (according to the Plaza).

As anyone who participated in last years exhibition knows, it was great fun for the kids to have a non-competitive opportunity to skate for the public (and mom, dad, grandma, grandpa, aunts, etc.)

A final decision has not yet been made regarding our involvement, but apparently they listen to the public (that's YOU, folks!) So call now and let your feelings be known (let's all be polite and diplomatic, now). The number is: 442-4000. Ask for any of the following: Nancy Cummings, Mike Alt or Connie.

Ad Space Available

In order to help defray printing and mailing costs involved with publishing a monthly newsletter, the CCFSC board has decided to offer a small amount of advertising space in the upcoming issues of "Ice Chips."

A maximum of one full page of ad space will be offered in each issue. All submissions must be camera ready.

The initial rates will be as follows:

Business card size:..... $10.00/month

Quarter Page:..... $20.00/month

Half Page:.....$40.00/month

Advertiser committing to a 12 issue contract will be given a discounted annual rate equal to 10 times the monthly rate. Contact Jennifred Billeci at 485-8456 for more information.
